

AGREE, DISAGREE OR UNDECIDED

Learning Intention: To challenge our understanding of the definition of The Common Good.

Instructions: Read each of the below statements and decide whether you agree, disagree or are undecided.

The Common Good is about me and my right to do what I want.

Mandatory school uniforms contribute to The Common Good.

The Common Good is built upon the principle of human dignity and the equality of all people.

The Common Good recognises that human beings realise their dignity and achieve their destiny as communities, not in isolation.

The Common Good does not require a foundation of basic rights which are minimum standards of life in society.

The Common Good is personal, not communal.

Clearing land for additional housing contributes to The Common Good.

The Common Good is directed by a moral concern that each person must participate and share in the benefits of social advances.

The Common Good is needed to avoid the harmful forces of coercion, domination or exploitation.

The Common Good is needed for the overall just functioning of a society.

The Common Good recognises that governments and political institutions are necessary and have active responsibilities for achieving The Common Good.

The Common Good needs to be a transnational/global reality encompassing the entire human family.

The Common Good is utilitarian in nature: it is the greatest good for the greater number.

Wearing face masks to prevent COVID-19 transmission contributes to The Common Good.

The Common Good means I put community needs before my own needs.